The history of Santa Maria barbecue

In the early 1800's, ranchers in Central California's Santa Maria Valley helped each other with the roundup. Upon its completion, friends and neighbors would gather together to socialize and celebrate. They prepared a feast of thick beef roasts over the hot coals of a red oak fire and served it with the traditional fare: Pinto beans, homemade salsa and garlic bread. It was in this spirit of hospitality and celebration that the rich tradition of Santa Maria Barbecue was born. It has developed into what is considered by many to be the best barbecue in the world.

Enjoy!
